In carmine Vergiliī, scrīptōris Rōmānī illius, Graecī multās cōpiās contrā Trōiam dūcunt. “Bellum sine ūllā causā bonā aut propter sōlam iram gerere numquam dēbēmus,” Trōiānī cōgitābant; “sed libertātem vitāsque populī sine bellō dēfendere nōn possumus— quārē bellum cum Graecīs erit necessārium.” Propter deōs Graecī Trōiānōs tum vincere nōn poterant. Ad portās Trōiae, igitur, magnum equum ligneum trahere audēbant; in istō equō erant multae cōpiae Graecae. Lāocoon inquit (says), “Nōn estis sānī, Ō Trōiānī— Graecī numquam sunt vērī! Sī cōpiae sunt in hōc equō, in perīculō erimus!” Sed serpentēs malī Lāocoontem strangulant, et Trōiānī equum in Trōiam dūcunt. Dum nox est et Trōiānī dormiunt, cōpiae ex illō equō dēscendunt et multōs necant.
